

Achieving Greater Standards of Care.

EmpowerED.

The Board of Certification for Emergency Nursing® works to empower ED nurses to achieve greater standards of care and better patient outcomes through certification. There are currently more than 46,800 nurses holding their BCEN® specialty certification. And that number is growing!

Here's what CEN® certification could mean to your ED, and to your nurses.

Nurses are on the front lines of your Emergency Department.

And because EDs are unpredictable, dynamic and always in motion, your nurses must be prepared to handle the gamut of emergent situations, using keen judgment and confidence.

In a study, 80% of nurses said certification made them feel more capable on the job.

Nurses with specialty certifications are more knowledgeable and are sure on their feet. They act swiftly and make fewer errors.

Nurses who achieve CEN certification have greater career satisfaction and opportunities.

Studies show a number of benefits to CEN nurses including opportunities for higher salaries, job advancement, and nursing self-efficacy.

Nursing supervisors report that nurses with CEN certification perform more accurately, stay current on technological advances, treat safety as a top priority, and exhibit a high level of ethical behavior.

Certified nurses are more engaged and more focused on patient outcome.

This leads to higher retention, better risk management, the possibility of downstream revenue and increased market share.

Certified ED nurses have the skills and knowledge to improve patient outcomes

- Reducing falls
- Preventing infection
- Lessening length of stay and improving readmission rates
